

Kelli Walker-Jones is the director of TPC (Triangle Pastoral Counseling) in Raleigh, North Carolina. She is an ordained United Methodist minister and a member of the North Carolina Annual Conference. Her academic preparations include a B.A., Rhodes College, Memphis, TN and an M.Div., the Divinity School, Duke University. A minister for over 30 years, her experience includes rural church ministry, large church staff ministry and serving on the staff at Duke Divinity School where she worked extensively with ministerial students in recruitment, supervision, and field placement.

Prior to becoming Center Director, Kelli and Dick Hester co-directed two Lilly Grants on Sustaining Pastoral Excellence. She continues to lead clergy groups, do narrative leadership facilitation training and individual mentoring.

Kelli leads out of a narrative model that invites story gathering and deep listening.

Kelli is married to Logan Jones, a Moravian minister and CPE supervisor. They have two adult daughters.

Publications include:

Know Your Story and Lead with It: The Power of Narrative in Clergy Leadership. Blue Ridge Summit, PA: Rowman and Littlefield, 2009.

“Tilling Our Stories,” in So Much Better: How Thousands of Pastors Helped Each Other Thrive. St. Louis: Chalice Press, 2013